Lives: Seattle, Washington

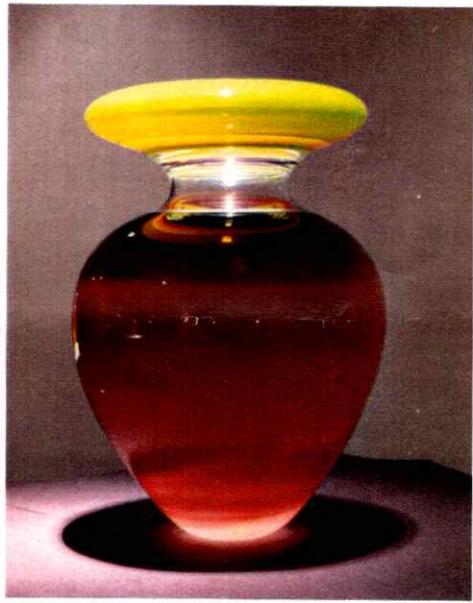

One of the Northwest's best known glass artists, Sonja Blomdahl combines fluid form with brilliant, pure color in her vessels. Although her work is elegant in its simplicity, Blomdahl has mastered the complexity of color and light. Her bowls are made from bands of luminous colors that transform as they catch the light and play off one another. The intermingling of color and light in the vessel creates a sensation of light emanating from within. Blomdahl received a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art, Boston, and attended the Orrefors Glass School, Orrefors, Sweden, in 1974. Her awards include a National Endowment for the Arts Visual Arts Fellowship and her work has been included in important national and international exhibits and collections of glass.
